was pushing online repair manuals from Alldata and Mitchell1. I made some money, and in all fairness, they have a great product. The online manuals gave excellent repair information, had the exploded views and wiring diagrams that I needed to fix my car plus kept me up to date on recalls and TSB information. <http://galika.com/userfiles/bosch-logixx-manual.xml>

Alldata was bought by AutoZone and they made the decision to release most of their DIY Repair information to the public on their website AutoZone.com. The reality is that many car brands were pulling their repair information off of AutoZone and coverage was getting thin. I believe AutoZone made the decision that this was no longer helping bring in parts sales and removed the repair information from their website. You can still get their excellent repair information on Alldata or checkout Mitchell1 which I recommend highly as well. Please note, these other methods are illegal and not a recommended way to procure an auto repair manual. Someone took the time to document the procedures and grabbing their work for free is stealing plain and simple. As they say, nothing in life is free, and you usually get what you pay for. Often someone has paid for a full downloaded copy and they are willing to share. It's not as if the original manufacturer would lose money because I'm using these indexes I'd never buy one of their manuals in the first place, just being honest. The only reason theres stuff available for everything pre2015 is because some guy had enough balls to crack ELSAWin and post it for download whole. At least not that Ive ever been able to find and not for a lack of trying. Hopefully Im wrong and someone answers with one because Id love to know it too. Most have a program available where you can access one of the big guys from home. Chiltons or Automate usually. You can pay for Alldatadiy if you have a single car you want good info on. Alldatadiy is better than what the library offers to home users. Michell1 DIY is also fairly good, but also costs a little bit of cash. It all depends on what youre trying to accomplish. PDFs and Paper books should be a thing of the past. They are such a bitch to navigate compared to all of these web based services. Mitchell online is maybe the 2nd best thing to factory repair manuals, but normally you have to use it in the library and not just through the librarys website. Some libraries carry a fairly new information service, AutoMate, from a company called EBSCO, which provides a lot of online databases. AutoMate is currently kind of skimpy but does seem to have some pages from factory service manuals. EBSCO used to provide a more complete repair service, Auto Repair Research Center, but discontinued it. All rights reserved Back to top.
