Material Wood; Solid Wood Lead Free Yes Convertible Yes Conversion Types Day bed; Toddler bed Number of Mattress Height Settings 4 About year ago I purchased this 3in1 crib from Wayfairer.com. Initially I was very pleased with crib, however; about 56 months into using the crib I noticed large chunks of paint missing from the crib's top railings. I think the chipping happened and continues to happen when I change the crib's sheets. I often rest the mattress on top of the crib while swapping out the sheets. Now that my baby is older and is pulling herself up to stand while in the crib, I noticed tiny tooth marks that have also chipped paint from the railings. Basically, I'm very concerned that my daughter is eating paint. I think that this is an unacceptable problem to have with a crib. A crib should be durable enough to withstand the changing of sheets and a baby's mouth. A crib should be safe and should hold up to a baby's use. This was an expensive crib.

The changing table comes with a pad but you have to buy the mattress. One thing I was looking for in reviews is what bed to get, will it fit.

This item was out of stock for a while not only at wayfair but at several other stores. Wayfair was fabulous in keeping me up to date and emailed me the moment it came back in stock. I ordered the crib right away and it must of been fresh out of the factory because it reeks of varnish. Luckily we have a month or two to air it out before baby comes. The instructions were not the clearest but we had it all together in about an hour. The wood is solid and It seems very sturdy.
